The history of agriculture in India dates back to the Neolithic period. India ranks second worldwide in farm outputs. As per the Indian economic survey 2020 -21, agriculture employed more than 50% of the Indian workforce and contributed 20.2% to the country's GDP.

India has a rich agricultural heritage, with organic farming emerging as a prominent practice in recent years. Explore the vibrant landscape of organic farming communities in India, delving into both the advantages and disadvantages associated with this agricultural approach.

In a world battered by the COVID pandemic, the growth story of organic farming is unfolding with increasing demand not only in India but also globally.

"Farmers are the backbone of society. As a result, the entire population of the country depend upon farmers, be it small or the largest country. Though farmers have so much importance still they do not have proper living and that has to be more concerned by government in the days to come!"

– john F. kennedy "The farmer is the only man in our economy who buys everything at retail, sells everything at wholesale, and pays the freight both ways."
